Dear Dr. Krause,

We, the Chen Family, are pleased to put forward Wanshi Chen as an candidate for the position of RAN Chief cook, for the election to be held at RAN#90-e.

To start with, Wanshi is a serious runner, typically logging around 100km of distance a week. A runner is typically a heavy eater – these two are often bundled together, easily and...nicely! It may sometimes be mistaken that a heavy eater may not be that picky about food. For Wanshi, it is rather the other way around since eating is an integral part to stay fit to keep running fast.

For any good cook, good materials and ingredients are a must. Nothing is better than home-grown ones. This is something Wanshi on which has spent quite a lot of time since the start of the pandemic. While it is a completely different task than that in 3GPP, there are still a lot of characteristics in common: one needs to be patient, hard-working, impartial, and technical-oriented. The reward is also similar: harvest happiness!

Cooking then becomes a natural thing. There are many styles of food Wanshi loves to try. Best materials and ingredients deserve best cooking. A good preparation is important. It is like a magic thing to use a mix of flour and water to make a dough, to cut it into small pieces, to flatten out each one of them, and to finally make a flatbread, crispy and crunchy. There are many different styles of Chinese food – too many to list. Of course, there is also a type of food that many people love – home-made pizza with home-grown organic vegetables!

Similar to a 3GPP delegate who loves his/her work in 3GPP standardization, a good cook loves the food that he/she prepares. How about a big thump-up?

To sum up, the Chen family fully supports Wanshi Chen's candidacy as the position of RAN Chief cook. Whether he can win the election or not is one thing. If the lucky winner were not him, he would definitely be happy to try the food prepared by the final winner when the time arises!

Best regards,

The Chen Family
